

'SWIMMING TOPS' SAYS L. A. RECREATION HEAD

Reporting facts uncovered by the LePort Recreation Survey, C. P. Nicolls, director of Parks and Recreation for the City of Los Angeles, told the Swimming Pool Committee last Friday that swimming was found at the top of a list of benefits more often than all other activities surveyed.

The wartime Navy command reported the group that of 30 recreational activities, swimming was found tops in benefits derived from a standpoint of health, physical and social. It was also found best in promoting safety in sports and best from an educational aspect, he reported.

His statements, he said, were based on the recently completed

William Ralph LePort survey which was conducted with the assistance of the University of Southern California.

He told the group that any city of 20,000 or more should include a swimming pool among its recreational facilities. He said many cities of even smaller size had constructed pools.

Nicolls, speaking before the group headed by Charlie Gots, chairman, said that each of Los Angeles' City pools at some period during the year was leased by the School Board for instructional purposes. He stated that city-owned, school-operated pools were "very practical."

Bernard Lee, owner of Bernard's Family Shoe store, is chairman of the Finance Committee.
